Observations

By Bob Walsh

WHERE'S THE CHURCH

For centuries the effort to separate church from state was fought, and still is a major battling ground in the minds of some. But in the conscience of men as they live as citizens and as office-holders the church always should be a determining influence.

Keeping the church and state separated does not mean that the pulpit is to remain silent when major issues confront us. On the contrary we believe nearly all issues have a moral side and doubt if any wrong can result if the church inspires leaders to act accordingly, or if the public is moved to demand true justice from its officials.

And so where is the church in Little Rock? What is being said in the Little Rock pulpits? If Christ were to stand in the pulpits of that city what would he tell those congregations to do?

Even as you do unto the least of these you do unto me?

WHO WILL FACE IT?

Every time the Pennsylvania legislature and its governors sit down to plan the next two years of operation there is a round of pushing and pulling concerning how much should be spent and where it is to be found. Both the state and its subdivisions are hampered by a constitution that is out of date and by a tax structure that was not provided with true democracy in mind, to say nothing of fairness.

We have glanced at the GOP platform for this fall and we find nothing there to brighten the tax picture. We have not seen a Democrat list of promises but we are pessimistic about either group of politicians having the courage to work for a truly fair tax base.

The Republicans reveal why the state doesn't have one. They plainly oppose an income tax. And until the income tax is sold to the people at all levels no such amendment will be made to the constitution.

Taxes are very like castor oil. No one wants to taste it. The sick will drink more medicine than is needed if it is hidden by syrup. Millions of taxpayers dish out more than their share only because they want taxes to be hidden.

The only fair tax is the one based on your ability to pay, not on how much you spend or how you spend your income. But with major parties failing to sell a fair tax, and with the press so controlled by big business that it avoids such issues, the people are years away from enlightenment.

Though most of us realize that all governing groups will need more money and better ways of getting it, few of us have the vaguest notion of how it can be obtained. The people have a right to know exactly how a candidate intends to give more service and provide the additional funds it will require.

NO CENSOR, NO LIBEL

Federal and state courts have ruled that a radio station is not liable for what is said by political candidates who have been given equal time under the Federal communications act. Stations are denied the right of censorship even if they consider the material to be defamatory.

They must give all candidates equal time, and those candidates are free to say what they want. The station can not be sued.

A recent example involved Edward Lamb, who owns many radio and television stations, including one in Erie. Rep. Pat Sutton charged him with being a communist and claimed his radio-tv-license had been revoked. This was not true and Mr. Lamb sued both Sutton and the station over which he made his statements.

The federal court granted Lamb $25,000 to be paid by Sutton, but absolved the station. Radio and television now can stand on legs which quake a little less, and politicians either must speak the truth or be prepared to support their personal invective with their own pocketbook.

The same applies in some degree to political statements published in a newspaper. If they are in the form of advertisements they should be accompanied by the names of those making the disparaging statements. Otherwise it can be assumed the newspaper accepts the responsibility.

Thus we have a freer use of press and radio and the blame roosting on the egg who cackles.

BUYERS' CORNER

AND THE CHEVROLET

To the cars already previewed we now add the Chevrolet which will be seen a week from today. It will have the low, broad look of GM cars with more emphasis placed on the horizontal wings of the rear fenders than was the case with those introduced by Chevy in 1958.

Lowness again is the aim, with even the headlamps dropping seven inches. And the air intakes are coupled with the parking and turn lamps. If you can't find the fuel cap it is located below the V of the wings, behind the license plate.

The V8 motors will range from 185 to 315 hp. A new six cylinder is claimed with a 10 per cent mileage improvement. There also is a manually set constant throttle which is released when brakes are applied (and scares us). A finish that does not have to be polished for three years, 28 to 1 steering ratio, zinc-lined mufflers, more glass, larger brakes, and cooler motor operation are among the many pitches you will be hearing and reading.

BUT WE DON'T HEAR

We continue to look in vain for the really "safe" car. We hear little about efforts to stop rusting out, though the Rambler is guaranteed against it. The majority are longer, wider, faster, and obviously more expensive to operate.

One car even is talking about wider wheel tracks, nice on curves but tough on servicing racks and parking.

WANTA SELL POOLS

An agent is being sought for the Esther Williams swimming pools in Warren county. These are pools for private use. A bit of cool cash is required before the franchise is assigned.

DEODORANT WAR

Apparently their best friend finally has broken down and told all. Men are starting a body deodorant war by showing a growing interest in the way they smell. Not only are they interested but they are less ashamedly admitting it by buying the stuff that keeps them on a level of sweetness with the ladies.

So follows a campaign to sell them more and the ad agencies are preparing a barrage of appeals to the masculine share of the market. Men have proved they will buy but they must be pushed. So the ad rash.

Proof that they are prime targets is increased use of body sweeteners in the past five years. Five years ago about 40 per cent of the men cared how they offended. Now 62 per cent give a darn. And the ads hope to make more of them aware that the nostril has its social powers.

THEY'RE TELLING US?

It is illegal to promote vibrator devices and weight reducers and cure-alls for disease . . . it says in a release passed out to the press by a field visitor of the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

It also tells about poison label requirements, and unveils the claim that a vacuum cleaner will protect your family from infectious diseases, as promoted by some salesmen.

It goes on in this manner, revealing violations which are not news to our readers. We have been carrying such revelations since 1948.

The field agents are attempting to interest the newspapers in carrying these money-saving and life-protecting facts. Which seems appropriate for newspaper week. Why doesn't the press (and radio) provide protection from the very lies by which it commercially profits?

RALPH W. PRIES, theatre concessionaire of Drexel Hill, who has been named Pennsylvania State Chairman for the March of Dimes for the third successive year.

The appointment was announced by the National Foundation, which now, in addition to its battle against polio, is waging an attack in the field of virus research.

Locally the Warren Zonta Club has elected to continue conducting the March of Dimes campaign in Warren County.

MR. AND MRS. FRANKLIN HOFF

TO SPEAK HERE, Mrs. Olive S. Hoff, formerly of Warren, will discuss "Illiteracy, Public Enemy Number One" when she addresses members of the Woman's Club and their guests at 2 p. m. Monday, October 13, in the club auditorium.

In her address she will point out the magnitude of the illiteracy problem in the United States, and steps being taken to eliminate it.

Mrs. Hoff, with her husband, Franklin Hoff, has been working in close association with Dr. Frank C. Laubach, world literacy expert, for more than a year.

Following months of intensive study at the Laubach Literacy Center near Baltimore, they taught adult illiterates to read and write by the Laubach Method. After organizing literacy committees at Ann Arbor Michigan, they were sent by Dr. Laubach to Memphis, Tennessee.

They took part in the successful pioneer breakthrough by WKNO-TV teaching literacy by television, with the Laubach Method.

The Hoff's helped plan the first national Conference on World Literacy by Television held in Memphis during August. More recently they returned to Baltimore to prepare special speakers kits on Literacy. Mrs. Hoff initiated the proposal of Literacy as a project for the General Federation of Woman's Clubs, officially adopted at the meeting of its national board in Washington, D. C., October 1st, 2nd and 3rd.

The Hoff's, both well known in this area, left Warren in April of 1956 for Alaska where they became affiliated with radio station KSEW in Stika. They have traveled considerably since leaving their posts there.

In Brief

CD EXERCISE. Eight counties of this area, including Warren will participate in a special Civil Defense Exercise this coming Saturday afternoon.

As a part of the drill, several of the fire departments from the county are scheduled to meet at the Irvine Bridge at 1:30 p.m. and will proceed from there to Tionesta.

Other CD divisions from the county that will be taking part are the Rescue, Medical and Welfare, Communications and Radiological. The Red Cross and Salvation Army will also have a role in the program.

Count CD director William Fuellhart estimates that over 100 Warren County individuals will have a role in this 8-county exercise.

MORE CONSTRUCTION. Buildings continue to go up in Warren. At the present the Penn Furnace and Iron Co. is constructing a building, approximately 80 by 160 feet, at its Pennsylvania ave., W., plant site. It will be used as a paint shop, for tank repair and for storage.

SCHOOLS OVERCROWDED. The need for the development of a long time program was realized Monday night when the Warren Borough School Board met and discussed the overcrowded conditions at Seneca School, the lack of rooms at the Lacy building and the eventual needs at Home Street School.

Bills approved by the board were $1,286, orders written during the month; $590, substitutes employed; $784, special services; $90, recreation services; and $99, janitors' overtime. Approval also was given to pay bills in the amount of $67,895. The larger bills included in this figure were $39,646, monthly share for operation of junior and senior high buildings; $18,446, final payment of rental on Jefferson building; $3,728, commission and expense to tax collector; $1,420, to solicitor for purchase of land and costs near the Home Street building.

The Tuberculosis and Health Society was given permission to administer the skin tests to pupils in the third grade with parental approval.

CHANGED HIS MIND. Two cars sideswiped about 6:20 p.m. Wednesday at the intersection of Carver st. and Pennsylvania ave. causing nearly $250 in damages.

Police reported that Donald L. Miller, Clarendon, was going to make a left turn off the avenue and then changed his mind and swung to the right as Richard Pascuzzi, 110 N. South st., Warren, started to swing around the forward car.

ONCOMING CARS operated by Ed Heffernan, 802 W. Fifth ave., Warren, and Trevor Johns, Pittsburgh, collided on the Warren-Kinzua rd. about midnight Tuesday. Several hundred dollars damage resulted in the mix-up.

A PAIR OF MINOR traffic mishaps took place in Warren Borough last Friday.

The first was about 2 p.m. on Pennsylvania ave., E., where Harvey J. Comino, Alliance, O., pulled from a parking space and caught the side of a passing car operated by Gertrude Beach, 9 Glenwood ave., Warren.

About 6:50 p.m. Clyde J. Brown, 610 Pennsylvania ave., E., Warren stopped for an unidentified car that crashed a stop sign at the Hazel st. and Pennsylvania ave. intersection and was struck in the rear by Shelby Walter Zuck, of R.D. 1, Tidioute. Only minor damage was caused in both cases.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED. William Wade Ransom, 46, Youngsville, was fatally injured Sunday when, according to authorities, a 20-gauge shotgun being carried by an eleven-year-old boy accidentally discharged and struck the victim in the head.

The shooting accident occurred on a range west of Youngsville where the Brokenstraw Fish and Game Club was conducting a shoot.

$2,000 DAMAGE was caused and a 14-year-old Youngsville boy injured about 10:30 Friday night when a station wagon operated by Willis Sullivan, Jr. R.D. 1, Youngsville, missed a curve while proceeding along the Follett Run rd. Treated at Warren General Hospital was Ed Skinner, a passenger.

SEVERAL required treatment for injuries after two cars collided east of Sugar Grove on the Lanning Hill rd. about 6 p.m. Saturday. The operators were Mary Lou Falconer, R.D. 2, Russell, and Herman Shirley, R.D. 3, Sugar Grove. Both drivers and three passengers in the Shirley vehicle received treatment.

TWELVE HUNDRED Boy Scouts from Warren County will be out Saturday distributing 12,000 copies of the Civil Defense Handbook for Emergencies as a part of the national Boy Scout preparedness program. The booklets are free of charge.

At the same time the Cub Scouts will visit the downtown areas of the county's communities to hand out home and traffic safety pamphlets.

SURPLUS FOOD for Warren County will be distributed Wednesday, October 15. Items consist of butter, cheese, milk, rice and flour.

A GRAND PRIZE of a new 17-inch Sylvania portable television set will be given a lucky shopper during the Sidewalk Bargain Fiesta to be held in Warren this Friday and Saturday. The prize has been made available by Sylvania which is joining 70 local merchants in this event of the Warren Area Chamber of Commerce's retail division.

In addition to the merchants' displays there will be 23 special exhibits by county groups and organizations. Ben White's Merry-Go-Round will also be available for the kiddies.

Another unusual feature will be the appearance of a party of Seneca Indians in full costume.

OF INTEREST HERE was word received that Yeoman 3/c John Lardner, USN, has organized a Boy Scout Troop in Rota, Spain. The scouts and cubs are sons of Naval personnel, but eventually Spanish boys will be added.

John, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lardner, Youngsville became an Eagle Scout in the Chief Cornplanter Council in 1957.

THE TIME HAS COME to get your Christmas packages ready for overseas. Gifts to the Far East by surface transport (ordinary parcel post) should be mailed by October 15 at the latest if they are to reach their destination in time; to Africa or the Near East by November 1; and to Europe or South and Central America by November 10.

GUEST SPEAKER at the monthly meeting of the Warren County Medical Society October 21 in the Penn Laurel Motel will be Dr. Murray B. Ferderber, Pittsburgh. He will discuss "Management of the Stroke Patient".

FIVE WARREN COUNTY persons who have just qualified as First Aid Instructors are Lillian Chandler and Scott Stuart, Jr., Sugar Grove; Harold F. Utley, North Warren; Donald Sharp, R. D., Warren; and James Keller, Warren. The instructor of the course was Z. V. Harkleroad, a representative from National Red Cross headquarters.

People in the county interested in organizing groups to receive standard and advanced courses in first aid should contact the local Red Cross chapter.

AT PRINTING SCHOOL. John T. Berdine, of Warren, has enrolled as a freshman in the Printing Department at Rochester Institute of Technology, Rochester, N.Y. The 1957 Warren high school graduate is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Berdine, 9 Woodcrest dr., Clarendon.

GLEASON IS BACK

Jackie Gleason's first sketch on his return show last week involved my favorite among all his personalities, Reggie Van Gleason, who used to break me into little pieces. This is the mon-strously rich guy who was heralded on this show as a guy "who wants to buy out the At-lantic Ocean and close it to the pub-lic." In a court-room scene, this character is asked where he was on the night of August 12, 1956, and he says he was coming home from a New Year's Eve party.

Well, that is the sort of wildly exaggerated drunk humor that used to make me come unstuck but it fizzled badly on the opening show. The beautiful blondes were there. Gleason himself was there with the manic eyeballs and the air of command and raffish authority. The jokes were at least as outrageous. But somehow it didn't come off. Perhaps it was Art Carney we missed. Or maybe -- and I prefer to believe this -- it's just because this was the first show and we're all a little edgy and over-expectant -- not only Gleason but the rest of us.

I'd had lunch with Gleason a few days before the show and he was raving about Buddy Hackett, his new sidekick who is taking the place of Carney. "He's the great-est, that Hackett. Funniest man alive. And I'm going to give him a chance just to be himself. No-body else has ever let him just be himself which is the best thing he does."

Hackett was introduced in the first sketch but he seemed pretty much like all the other Buddy Hacketts we have seen on television. Of course, here he was playing a character, Fritz, the Chinese houseboy, and it's just possible Mr. Gleason has other, more grandiose projects in mind later. Hackett is a funny fellow, though, and I have high hopes.

Mr. Gleason's second major operation of the evening was with another of his characters, Fenwick Babbitt. This is a mild, pop-eyed befuddled character, who peren-nially walks tilted. It was one of those old Charlie Chaplin type sketches where the guy is supposed to take the fur off the mannequin on the moving platform, climb a ladder, get another box, put a new fur on the mannequin, put the fur in another box, as bells ring and pandemonium ensues. It's mad, exuberant humor and I love it.

Warren, Pa.

The score for the half-hour was not good and I don't know why ex-actly but I expect things will iron out after a bit. After all, Gleason has been off the air for a couple of years. It takes a while. I asked him what he'd been up to while he was away. "Oh, recording quite a lot. I've just finished recording the whole of 'Tale of Two Cities' with a great cast of characters. It's going to be great. I don't think books are being read so I'm recording them. Word for word. You can listen while shav-ing."

It sounds like an awful idea so I switched to comedy. Has he seen any good new comedians? "Max Bygraves in London. He's just gorgeous. He knows everything. He knows how important it is to have the right kind of material and the right kind of curtain be-hind him."

There's been a lot of talk that everyone is too touchy so that you can't make fun of any person or profession or race, I said. "I never liked to reap laughs at any-one's expense," said Gleason. "But I do think because of the touchiness of the public, there are a lot of things I can't do that I would like to. I can do a great version of de Kingfish or of Burt Williams in blackface -- but I don't dare. It was never the bus drivers who raised a stink about the Honey-mooners -- it was non-busdrivers who were afraid I was offending the bus drivers. The bus drivers loved it. I'm a member of their union."

"It bothers me that all the com-edians want to be nice guys. Why can't a guy be a schnook? Look at W. C. Fields. He was great. You believed him because you thought he really acted that way at home. He really kicked babies and drank booze by the gallon. So when he did it on the screen you laughed."

"I got a couple new characters this year. I've got Rum Dum, a guy who is maggotty drunk all the time and is always getting kicked out of bars. You never see him take a drink. He isn't in a place long enough before he gets kicked out -- all in pantomime. I've also got a brother-in-law situation com-edy thing where I play the obnox-ious brother-in-law and Hackett plays Herbert Hobbs, not a Casper Milquetoast but somebody who is funny because he's so honest."

TREASURY AGENT:

U. S. UNDERCOVER MEN RISK DEATH TO MAKE 'BUY' OF HEROIN ABOARD FRENCH SHIP AND NAB TWO CREWMEN

This is the fifth of 12 articles dramatically telling how U. S. Treasury agents fight the never-ending battle against smugglers, dope peddlers and the like. The series is taken from "Treasury Agent," just published by Simon and Schuster, Inc., and written by newspaperman Andrew Tully.

BY ANDREW TULLY

THE SLIGHT SQUINT in the left eye of the brawny French ship's officer suddenly was more pronounced as he reached into a drawer and took out two hypodermic needles, which he tossed on the desk in his cabin in the S. S. Marseille.

"These are poisoned needles," he told the slight, wiry undercover agent of the United States Customs Service.

"I use them to take care of double-crossers," he added, and then smiled wickedly. "Would it interest you to know that I have already killed two men with them?"

Joseph Fortier, assistant supervising customs agent in Miami, managed to suppress a shudder.

"Listen, Robert," he said roughly, "don't waste my time with your boasting. I came here to buy heroin, not to listen to the story of your life."

It was a sticky Saturday afternoon in July, 1957, and Fortier hoped he was onto something big. He had been working on the case of the French freighter, Marseille, for three months now, and it had begun to look as if he'd be able to "make a buy."

Fortier's adventures in courting sudden death had started on April 26 when he got himself introduced aboard the Marseille as a prospective narcotics peddler interested in heroin. At that time he was taken in tow by the chief steward, an Italian named Jean Bruzzoni, who introduced him to a crew member he said was running a kind of seagoing heroin store.

Fortier and the seller agreed on a price of $2,500 per kilogram, and it was arranged that the heroin would be delivered to Fortier the next time the vessel made port in Miami.

Fortier waited three months. Then on July 20, the sticky Saturday afternoon, his informant brought him word that the Marseille was in port again and that the vessel's first lieutenant wanted to see him.

"He claims he's in charge of all narcotics activities on the ship," Fortier was told. "He says he wants to ask you some questions and he says you'd better have the right answers."

Fortier answered the summons, but only after taking precautions. As he walked up the gangplank of the Marseille, customs Agents J. E. Wallace and William B. Lankford were standing by in a waterfront bar. Their instructions were to give Fortier two hours and then come looking for him.

In the first lieutenant's cabin,

Fortier was introduced to an officer, dapper in a white uniform with gold epaulets bearing two stripes. He was surly and suspicious.

"You speak French, thinking to fool me," he told Fortier. "I suppose you will claim you are French."

Fortier grinned. "Yes, monsieur," he replied. "I am French -- but from Montreal, not France. My family speaks French well. It is a tradition in our family."

The officer crushed out a cigarette. "Ha! But I believe you are a Frenchman from France. I have seen you before; you are a French policeman."

That made the air even more sticky, but Fortier his skin crawling managed it. He launched into a discussion of the state of the dope-pushing racket, the best markets, the easiest ports to operate in. He knew all the phrases, and he tossed in a few names that were respected in the dope world. The officer seemed satisfied.

Carefully, Fortier led him into a discussion of a deal between them. The officer asked about quality and method of delivery. Fortier said he wanted only first-grade heroin and suggested the delivery be made at a safe place, to be specified later.

The officer had conditions. He insisted that a photograph be delivered to him of the person who would take delivery, that delivery would only be made on board the vessel, that no samples would be given.

Fortier balked. "I'm not giving anybody any photographs," he told him. "It's too risky. And the stuff has to be delivered ashore."

The officer dived into his desk drawer, pulled out the needles and delivered his spiel of horror. But when Fortier seemed unimpressed, he calmed down.

"We will get along," the officer said, with that horrible grin. "Come, we have agreed on four thousand per kilo; now let us have a drink."

The hooch was Pernod, a popskull Fortier suspected. So he drank sparingly, while the officer belted one after another. Bleary-eyed, after a short half hour, he called for the second lieutenant, a tall, slender officer, and asked him if he had any heroin aboard.

The second lieutenant said he had four kilos but that he was saving them for a customer. The two got into a hot argument, which ended with the second lieutenant striding from the cabin.

Fortier, too, feigned disgust. "We can't do business with this man," he told one of the officer's shipmates. "I'm leaving."

And while the officer lounged, brooding, on his berth, Fortier made his escape.

Fortier figured that tore it. But apparently other crew members were still interested and could handle the first lieutenant. At any rate, the next morning Fortier got a phone call. The caller said he'd been instructed by the third officer, an Yves Bertin, to ask Fortier to contact Jean Bruzzoni again.

Fortier was delighted; the next morning -- Monday, July 22 -- he met Bruzzoni at the Sunshine Cafe, on the road to Fort Lauderdale, about three miles from the ship's berth. In the restaurant also were Agents J. E. Wallace, John M. Hooe and Sam Johnson -- to get a good look at Bruzzoni for later identification in court.

Bruzzoni was eager, and Fortier had no trouble making arrangements with him for the buy. They set delivery for 6:45 that night, when the stevedores and crew members would be eating dinner and there would be as few people in the vicinity as possible. Fortier would be standing at a point across the street from the wharf where the ship was tied up, while his partner -- who would be a narcotics agent -- would go aboard the ship with Bruzzoni to meet the seller.

After the introductions, Bruzzoni would leave the partner with the seller and return to Fortier, who would have in his pocket $16,000 to pay for four kilos at $4,000 a kilo. Fortier would show the money to Bruzzoni and let him count it.

Fortier's partner, meanwhile, would be testing the narcotics. Then the seller and Fortier's partner would join Fortier and Bruzzoni ashore and consummate the deal.

Fortier left Bruzzoni and returned to his office, only to discover complications. Supervising Agent C. E. Wyatt had been scraping up money everywhere -- from offices as far away as Laredo, Texas, and Los Angeles -- but all he could raise was $14,000. That had to be enough, and Fortier stuck it in his pocket.

Shortly before H-hour, Fortier picked up his "partner" in a Miami bar. He was Salvatore Vizzini, an agent for the Bureau of Narcotics, borrowed for the occasion. Vizzini spoke Italian fluently and would be introduced as a dope-pusher from Chicago.

At the wharf, promptly at 6:45, Fortier and Vizzini parted. Vizzini proceeded up the gangplank, where he was met by Bruzzoni, who took him below decks to his cabin. Another Italian was there; he was introduced to Vizzini as Jean Baptiste Pompa, the seller.

Pompa immediately tossed a flood of Italian at Vizzini, and the agent returned it in kind, sprinkling the flow with authentic references to the dope racket. Bruzzoni left them and, across the street from the wharf, met Fortier with word that Pompa would not deliver the heroin until he had seen the money.

"He wants you to give me the money and let me take it aboard ship," explained Bruzzoni.

Fortier pretended to be furious.

"What's this a double-cross?" he asked. "I thought we had an agreement. Goddamit, I'm damned if I'm going to hang around here while you horse around. It's too dangerous. Go back and tell your man no soap."

Bruzzoni hustled back to Pompa's cabin, where he and Pompa talked excitedly in French. Vizzini busted in to ask them the score.

"Your partner won't give Jean the money," Pompa told him sulkily.

"Sure he won't," replied Vizzini. "What the hell, we made a deal that no money changed hands till I tested the heroin and made sure the weight was okay. I'm gonna get off this ship and get the hell out of this neighborhood. I'm not gonna hang around the docks with my partner with fourteen grand in his pocket."

Bruzzoni and Pompa conferred, then Bruzzoni told Vizzini, "C'mon, let's go." Vizzini started to pick up his hat and umbrella, but Bruzzoni told him, "Leave 'em there. You're coming back."

At Fortier's informal command post, he and Bruzzoni talked it over in French. Fortier turned to Vizzini and said Bruzzoni still insisted on getting the money first. Vizzini turned on Fortier furiously.

"What the hell kind of deal you running?" he asked Fortier. "You bring me all the way from Chicago with seven grand and now there's this snafu. I can get you some heroin in Chicago. Maybe the grade won't be so good, but we won't have to go through this crap."

Bruzzoni folded, then. He agreed to go back to the ship with Vizzini so the latter could pick up the heroin. In turn, Fortier agreed to move up a little closer to the ship, near a warehouse on the wharf opposite the stern of the vessel.

Back in Pompa's cabin, Pompa gave Vizzini a third degree on the subject of Fortier. He asked Vizzini how long he'd known Fortier and if he was all right.

"Listen," Vizzini told Pompa heatedly. "All I'm gonna tell you is that I would not come all the way from Chicago with seven thousand to go into a deal with a man if I didn't know the man was okay. I've known the guy for 10 years, and this is not the first time I've done business with him."

"What are you going to do with the heroin?" asked Pompa. "How much are you going to sell it for?" Vizzini exploded.

"Listen, I didn't ask you where you got it and how much you paid for it!"

"Good, that is what I wanted you to say."

Things were looking up. Pompa told Vizzini he was going ashore to stay with Fortier (and protect that $14,000, of course) until the heroin was taken off the ship. He added that "somebody" would deliver the heroin to Vizzini in the cabin. Then he and Bruzzoni walked out.

Having pointed out Fortier to Pompa, Bruzzoni returned to the cabin a few minutes later. Shortly thereafter, the door opened a few inches and an arm appeared and dropped a small blue duffel bag on the floor of the cabin. Bruzzoni picked up the bag and handed it to Vizzini.

In the bag, wrapped in a woman's soiled pink slip were two packages. One contained three smaller packages, the other two.

Vizzini laid the packages on the bunk and opened three of them by tearing the brown paper wrapping. Inside were glassine bags containing a white powder. Carefully, Vizzini shook a few grains out of each bag onto a piece of newspaper. Then he took three ampules out of his pocket containing his Marquis reagent -- a testing compound containing an acid radical.

Vizzini tested the heroin by dropping a few grains of each sample into a separate ampule. Two of the ampules immediately turned purple, showing the samples were heroin.

Bruzzoni took some wire from one of his drawers and wrapped two of the packages of heroin around Vizzini's waist, and a third around his left leg. The two remaining packages were attached to Bruzzoni's waist.

Bruzzoni put on his trousers and shirt but seemed unhappy.

"How do I look?" he asked Vizzini.

"Fine, fine -- like Mae West," Vizzini told him. "Don't be such a worrier."

Fortier and Pompa were getting along fine down on the wharf. Fortier chatted away, secure in the knowledge that there were friends in the neighborhood. In hiding places all over the wharf were Customs Agents Hooe, Sam Johnson, Wallace and Lankford and Narcotics Agent Doug Hernandez. The moment for the pounce was approaching.

As Vizzini and Bruzzoni started to leave the cabin, Bruzzoni told Vizzini to walk ahead of him. But Vizzini was not buying that. He wanted Bruzzoni well out in front, so that the covering agents would see him plainly when he, Vizzini, gave the signal that he had the heroin. He didn't want Bruzzoni dropping back to see if there was any trouble.

"I don't know my way, Jean," Vizzini told Bruzzoni. "You'd better lead the way."

So Bruzzoni walked on ahead, while Vizzini dawdled his way until he was a good 10 feet behind. As they reached the gangplank, Vizzini put on his cap and sunglasses, the signal that the delivery was about to be made.

When the two reached Fortier and Pompa, Vizzini had a squawk.

"Don't give 'em the money yet," he told Fortier. "There's something funny about two of these packages."

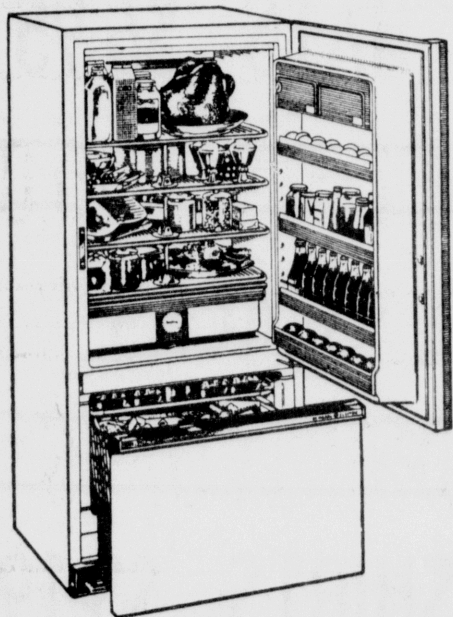

The delay was just long enough to give the covering agents time to emerge from their hiding places. Then, as Vizzini started to explain the delay to Pompa, Fortier took the $14,000 from his pocket and started to count it out.

He never finished counting. From five directions, five T-men converged on the little group. There was a scuffle, with Fortier and Vizzini carefully joining in. And mingled with the sounds of blows, Vizzini could be heard cursing Pompa in Italian for turning him in. Customs tried hard, but nobody ever was able to get anything on the lieutenant with the poisoned needles. Apparently he was not the kind of guy a fellow crew member cared to testify against.

But in November, 1957, Jean Baptiste Pompa and Jean Andre Bruzzoni, chief cook and first engineer of the S. S. Marseille, were sentenced to five years each in the Federal penitentiary.

KILLING TIME AND THE GAME

If baseball wants to save its life and gain new fans it is due for some radical changes in this age of the orbit. Watching the series by tv the emphasis placed on the "stall" by all involved caused many a dial to be turned to football over the week end. An occasional flip to see how things were going sufficed for millions of viewers.

We never could understand what tired a baseball player, unless it was his inactivity. A man might get to bat four times in two or three hours of play, and he might get to first one of those times. If he did he would be batting .250. None get there an average of twice a game.

Having arrived at first the law of averages says he will not reach second very many times, and in the average game he probably won't cover more than half that distance.

In the field he may not catch a ball all afternoon. Or he might catch three or four. So what wears them out? With the pitcher and the catcher having all the fun perhaps they are bored to weariness.

At least that is what is happening to your baseball fans who want so much action that even the rapidly paced sports constantly look for means of increasing the speed. Pro basketball packs them in by making the boys shoot the ball within a given number of seconds. Football prohibits stalling in the huddle. And both already make baseball look a barefoot hiker in a cactus bed.

There also is much lack of imagination in baseball. The Cobbs and the Wagners pioneered ideas that still are used. The Yanks stood there watching the first ball go by all afternoon in one game. Nearly every toss was a perfect strike. But you don't swing at the first one. (When the Braves broke this rule one day they got three straight hits and broke up the game.)

The biggest hold-up in baseball long has been recognized and efforts have been made to correct, but they haven't gone far enough. That is the time taken by pitchers. Bob Feller, one of the all-time greats, could put a rabid fan to sleep with his mound scraping, hat-pulling, ball-rubbing, and footings.

An exception today is Turley of the Yanks. He pitches like great basketball foul tossers perform. A deep breath and throw it. He doesn't even wind up.

Baseball has become a game of percentages. It has been learned what pays off in the long haul and few new ideas that violate the pattern are tried. It is a sport of cliches and is suffering box office anemia where it will hurt in days to come . . . the minor leagues, of which there are far less than a few years ago and will be even less. And the quality of tomorrow's play is dependent on today's shrinking farm system.

Such criticism we know is apt to antagonize many rabid diamond addicts, and we will be described as anti-baseball. The opposite is true. We believe that baseball has much to offer. It requires alertness, fast thinking, and team play. We want to see it kept alive and we hope ways are found to retain its basic format while injecting it with a stimulant that will attract added supporters.

And despite our ribbing about the lack of effort required by the average player in the average game, it is obvious to all that a man must be in the best of shape if he is to come through with a stolen base, a difficult fielding play, or nine innings of fast hurling. As in most sports the game usually is won in the grueling hours of practice and conditioning.

TARGET PRACTICE. Nearly 50 police officers from eight departments in this area participated in an FBI firearm school conducted here Monday and Tuesday in cooperation with the Warren Borough Police Department. Of special interest was the fact that the Oil City department had 100 per cent representation in the course which included both classroom instruction and range practice.

RETIRE. With over 35 years of service as employees of the Warren Post Office, Walter P. Mathyer (l.) and Merle B. Rowley (c.) retired last month.

This week postmaster S. B. Knabenshue (r.) presented the two with an Honorary Certificate for Meritorious Service. Mr. Mathyer was serving as a clerk and foreman, and Mr. Rowley as a city carrier, when their service ended.

October Maize

In this month of fair October,
In this month of hills with color,
With Christmas just around the elbow,
Comes the chant of mighty warriors,
Stirred by those beyond the sunrise,

Moved by Madison Avenue chieftains.

In their effort to impress us,
Take our wampum for our headdress,
Shake us down and most undress us,
Fill us with the season's harvest,
Wring our credit till it quivers,
They've invented days to woo us.

Days they've dreamed to honor
grandpaw,
Also one to honor grandmaw,
Then there's one that's called the sweetest,
Days for clean air, days for apples,
Days for macaroni, oil, and news-
boys,
By the laughing Allegheny,
By the mucky, murky waters.

Weeks they cleverly put together
Attracting squaws in all their feathers,
Honey, flowers, thrift, and these,
Donuts, popcorn, and anti-freeze,
One big warrior make plenty smoke,
Give way pretzels as warpath joke.

Far within the deep Penn forests,
Along the paths of Warren village
Richly lined by beads and fur piece,
Loudly call the jays and red squirrels,
Come to our shores, make heap
profit,
Deep within the pretty valley.

Come and see our wondrous bargains,
Moccasins for your papooses,
Fill our tepees with your maidens,
Fill your maidens with our honey,
While long grow October shadows,
Comes the end to daylight saving,
Comes the end to saving time,
Weeping passes poetry day,
And the end of this poor rhyme.

IT'S ILLEGAL. In season or out of season the cross bow is illegal for hunting in the state of Pennsylvania and most, if not all, other states.

This particular bow was confiscated by Game Commission officers
Dave Titus and Ed Bielawski last
Sunday morning from three R.D. 2, Conneaut Lake people who were in the stage of hunting deer at night.

Arrested were Robert J. Hollabaugh, 39, Mrs. Evelyn A. Steen, 41, and Eugene M. Riley, 29. Each paid a $100 penalty. They are, of course, only a few of the violators of the game laws that the Game Commission Officers must remain on the alert for.

The cross in the picture is 33 inches in length and 31 inches across. The quill is 19 inches.

WARREN SMOTHERS OILERS, BATTLE MEADVILLE SATURDAY

The Warren High School Dragons made good use of two long end runs and a long pass play to score three of their five touchdowns and gained ground consistently through the middle of the Oil City Defense to whip the Oilers, 31 to 0, in a District 10, Section II fray at Oil City last Friday night. The winning margin was the Blue and White's largest since 1956 and gave them the lead in the District 10, Section II title race.

The Oilers, definitely "up" for the game, controlled the ball most of the first half but were unable to penetrate the Dragon defense near the goal line.

The Dragons, on the other hand, ran only 11 plays in the first period and 9 plays in the second period. But two of the second period plays resulted in touchdowns.

On the second play of the second quarter, Dick Terry scampered 20 yards around his left end for a TD to end a 76-yard Warren drive. Later in the same period Terry went 75 yards on the same play behind some terrific blocking to score again for the Dragons and give them a 12 to 0 halftime lead.

The second half was all Warren as the Dragons scored two quick third quarter touchdowns and the reserves finished out the remainder of the game.

Warren took the opening kickoff and moved steadily down field with Bob Haslet ending the drive by going 22 yards for the TD and an 18 to 0 Warren lead.

Lou Mascaro unlimbered his passing arm on Warren's next series of plays which began on the Oil City 23. He first pitched one to Jack Lobdell who made an amazing catch near the sidelines but was ruled out of bounds by game officials. On the next play Mascaro again pitched to Lobdell who gathered in the ball along the sidelines near midfield and romped down the chalk line to score on the 60-yard pass play.

The Blue and White's last six pointer came in the final quarter when Jim Olson, Bill Mervine and Don McKelvy poured through the Oil City line to block a punt. McKelvy picked up the loose pigskin and ran it 40 yards for the score. A Mascaro to Brumagim pass added Warren's only PAT of the game and made the score 31 to 0 for Warren.

The Dragons used six plays or less to score in each of their four drives of 76 yards, 7 yards, 75 yards and 77 yards as the forward wall was able to shake the backs loose for long gains through the Oiler defense.

Next Saturday the Dragons will host the Meadville Bulldogs on Memorial Field in the Homecoming game at 1:30 p. m. A win in Saturday's game would give Warren no worse than a tie for the league title.

WARREN COUNTY GRID ACTIVITY THIS WEEK END

Warren County high school football teams will play in one Friday night game away and three Saturday afternoon games at home this week end.

Youngsville, 2 and 2, will travel to Otto Township, 1 and 2, for a Friday night game. The two teams have played no common opponents. The other three county grid squads will play home games on Saturday.

Warren, 3 and 1, will host Meadville, 3 and 1, in a District 10, Section II contest on Memorial Field Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p. m. Their only common foe, Franklin, has beaten both teams, Warren, 14 to 6, and Meadville, 21 to 6. Sheffield, 1 and 3, will entertain Smethport, 2 and 2, in an AML contest at Sheffield. The teams have faced no common foe.

Northern Area, 2 and 1, will play Brockton, N. Y., 0 and 3, in a Northwestern Conference affair on the Knights' home field. Randolph,

WARREN HIGH SCHOOL UNDEFEATED TEAM OF 1928

The Warren high school undefeated football team of 1928 will take to the gridiron once again this Saturday during special halftime ceremonies of the "homecoming" game between the WHS Dragons and the Meadville Bulldogs on War Memorial Field.

A "smoker" for the squad of '28 is planned for Friday evening at the Kalbfus Club on the Chapman Dam rd. Festivities will start about 8 p.m. and will conclude with a Fish Fry.

Tickets for this event are available from the sponsoring Sports

Boosters officers and directors, as well as at The Style Shop, Logan's, B and B Smoke Shop, United Cigar Store, Mack's News Room and the Savoy.

TD BOUND -- Dragon halfback Dick Terry outmaneuvered the Oil City safety man and scampered 20 yards to score the Dragon's first touchdown in second quarter play in

Warren's 31 to 0 win at Oil City last week end. Terry romped 75 yards on the same play later in the second period to score his second TD and give Warren a 12 to 0 halftime lead

NO GAIN was registered by this Oiler back as two Dragon defenders force him to the sidelines and out of bounds.

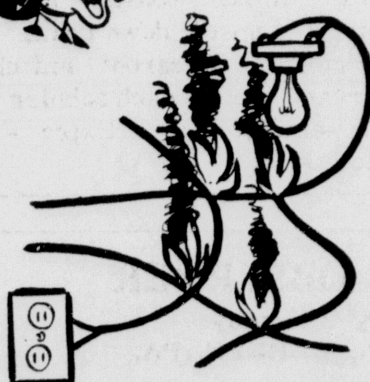

FAR ENOUGH -- Lou Mascaro and a Dragon lineman team up to bring down an Oil City runner who picked up yardage on this play in the first quarter of Friday night's game which gave Warren the lead in Section II, District 10 play. The Oilers, "up" for the game, dominated play during the first half but could not penetrate the Dragon defense close to the goal line. In the second half the Oilers were never in the ball game.

"The surest way to get ahead of Russia is to get behind America."--Terry McCormick.
